City Council puts off funding of Arts Council decision until September

by Lindy Magner

Nearly 70 persons, including children from toddlers to teens, packed the Council Chambers last Monday evening as the Council considered a request to add funding for the Lemon Grove Arts Council to its 1991-92 budget.

The Arts Council has received City funding for the past two years, enabling it to offer a variety of dance and arts classes for minimal fees.

After hearing a presentation from Teresa Wells, director of the Community Arts Advisory Council, and comments from participants in the program, Council members voted to grant no funding at the present time, but to review the matter in 60 days, at its September 3 meeting. However, they did agree to waive up to $3,000 in City fees on the expansion of the Arts Complex, but it was estimated that the fees might be in the hundreds rather than thousands

This "substitute" motion was made by Councilman Bob Burns in order to allow Wells' request for funding to be re-heard considered in light of State budget decisions which still are not certain. The initial motion, made by Councilman Craig Lake, would have denied funding to the Arts Council for fiscal 1991-92.

"I would hate to leave Teresa hanging on a string as to her funding; we have to be realistic in what we are saying and about what we can afford."

However, Councilman Brian Cochran took issue with this motion, stating; "There's no reason why we can't hear from her again in 30 to 60 days - it would be sending the wrong message to these people here to deny this request tonight."

The crowd erupted in loud and long applause, after which, Councilman Burns made his adopted motion.

In discussion, before voting on the substitute motion, Mayor Jim Dorman commented on the funding cuts already made to vital city departments because of the tight budget situation; "The city is experiencing tough times and has had to cut back on police protection and recreation in its (1991-92) budget; this puts us in a tough spot."

In her presentation, Wells reported that the arts Complex had recently been offered additional space by the landlord of the shopping center where the Arts Complex is located, and that she could double her classroom space.

"For a small investment, we would be able to double our space," said Wells, as she made her argument for continued funding from the City. She stated that the Arts Council is "beginning to make a name for Lemon Grove and its artistic endeavors," and without City funding, cannot apply for state and federal grants.

She pleaded with the Council to continue its funding for the Council which, for the last two years, has been $10,000 annually. However, Mayor Dorman remarked that this funding was "seed money" to get the Council off the ground, and it was not the intention of the City to be "plugged into" the funding scenario for the Arts Council every budget year.

Testimony was heard from parents whose children participate in the dance classes, with one mother, Sandra Dowdy, commenting that the city is "making a mistake" when it attempts to "cut back on Teresa by 100 percent and just cut back on Old Time Days by 25 percent."

Additional arguments were made by various mothers on the benefits of the dance classes to fostering self-esteem in their kids.

In another public hearing, the Council considered the appeal of the Planning Commission's decision to deny the request of nine window signs for two restaurants which will soon be part of the Lemon Grove Gateway project at Federal Blvd. and College Ave. The Council approved the increase in the number of signs from the six already approved by the Planning Commission to the nine requested for the Po'Folks Restaurant and the Papachino's Restaurant.

Also, the Council approved an increase in the annual lighting service charges for operation and maintenance of the City's lighting district. Similarly, increases were approved in benefit charges and connection fees for the City's sanitation district.

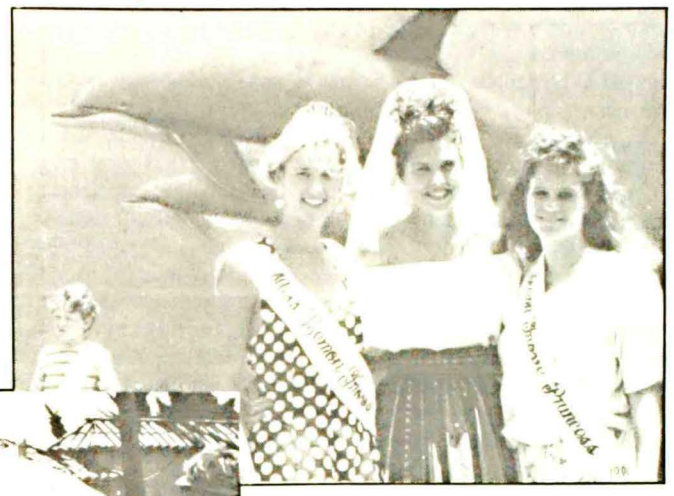
Before the business of the meeting began, Mayor Dorman made a presentation to Lemon Grove firefighter Tom McBride for his five years of service.

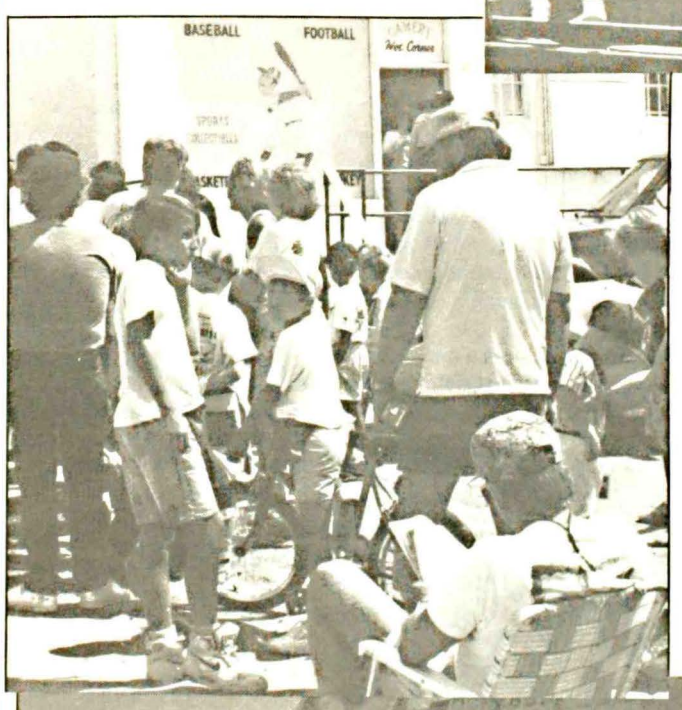
"We usually hand out pins for five years of service, but they're on order now becasue we ran out - we will get one to you, though," Mayor Dorman quipped.

Lemon Grove Day at the Del Mar Fair

Saturday, June 29th, was Lemon Grove Day at the Fair. The queens were there, a few "dignitaries" were there, and best of all, the mobile lemon was there (thanks to Pete Smith and family).

The parade, with dignitaries in a hay wagon, is not much of a spectacle, but is carried off with lots of spirit by the Fair personnel.





Tony Gwynn 'Day'

The biggest event of the day was not at the fairgrounds, but back in sleepy Lemon Grove, where the excitement mounted on Broadway, near Gamers, as the crowd gathered to get a ball, picture or baseball card autographed by Tony Gwynn of the Padres.

The line very quickly looped from Broadway to Golden Avenue and back to Broadway with kids of all ages hoping to get Gwynn's signature on something.

Swim coach parlays swimming strength in triathlon events

by Lindy Magner

With blond hair and a golden tan, Mike Smith has the look of a perennial lifeguard as he sits on the bleachers of Helix High School's outdoor pool where he has coached swim teams and water polo teams for eight years.

He has also supervised the aquatic program at Mount Miguel High School, teaching swimming for the last three years.

But this next few months will probably be more rigorous for the 42-year-old than his twelve summers spent lifeguarding on the New Jersey shore as he tries to squeeze in some training for the Bud Lite National Triathlon Championship - in additon to coaching summer-league swimming.

"If I work out and put in a good twelve weeks of training and put time into my biking and running, I should be ready for it," said Smith who recently qualified for the event by doing well in the Eighth Annual Rosarita Triathlon.

A seasoned competitor in triathlons, including the famed Iron Man event held in Hawaii, Smith says he enjoys putting his body to the test in this manner, even though it can be grueling.

"Oh, yeah, you ask yourself what you're doing there sometimes, but afterwards, you forget about the pain and want to do it again," said Smith with a smile as he spoke about the five times he has participated in the Iron Man, his best time being 11 hours, 29 minutes. "I usually finish in the top ten percent of triathlons, and the one in Rosarita was more my type of event, with only a three-mile run, 12 miles of biking and a 600-meter swim. I'm a much stronger swimmer and biker than I am a runner, and an event like the Iron Man is 1/2 running, so I don't do as well."

Between now and the championship in September, Smith plans to get in some training - yet, that may be hard to do, with coaching the Helix summer league water polo team during the day, and coaching the Swim West U.S. Swimming League team in the evenings.

"In July, I'll try to run seven miles five times a week and get on my bike more; I usually don't have to work on my swimming much, but I plan to do the La Jolla rough water event in September as a workout before the Bud Lite Championship," said Smith.

He sees himself continuing to compete in traithlons, though lately, he finds his focus turning to the development of another Smith swimmer - his daughter. "She will be a better swimmer than I am because she's gotten a much earlier start - she's already broken records in the butterfly when she's competed in L.A. meets," said Smith, "Micha just turned seven, but she's been competing in the eight-year-old category since she was six."

Smith was the all-round athlete type in high school back in Emmaus, Pennsylvania, lettering in swimming, track and field, and football. He was also a rowing champion, and participated in several triathlons which consisted of swimming, rowing and running, before he moved to San Diego in 1975.

"I wanted year-round summer, and I wanted to get my master's at San Diego State, so that's why I came here," said Smith,who taught swiming at El Capitan and Granite Hills before securing his current coaching position.

In his years at Helix, he has coached several winning teams. "We've been able to win because we work a lot harder than anyone else,"said Smith, adding that it is sometimes hard teaching at one school and coaching at another. "I can't recruit from my swimming classes for my teams, so it makes it difficult."

Even though his days end at 7:30 p.m., Smith has no desire to give up triathlons. "I see my self competing in Iron Man again in a couple years," he adds with a smile.

Personal comments of Councilman Bob Burns

Redistricting

The proposed redistricting maps are begging for comments, so here are mine.

The equalizing of supervisorial districts in terms of population, apparently is mandatory, following the taking of the census. While this requirement probably salves the ego of each supervisor with the knowledge that he or she has an equal number of souls to command, as their counterparts, it seems otherwise senseless. Exact equality could only be a momentary thing with the steady influx of people coming to our area, and would not be accurate again, until the next census. Big deal ...

The five districts each are distinctive and have their own special needs and problems. Two are City of San Diego for the most part and have very diverse characters, but have big city services provided. Another, is a mix of South Bay municipalities plus some unincorporated lands. The other two districts split large areas into North County and East County, again, with smaller cities and large amounts of county-served areas. Each has a different set of conditions, a different mix of services and unique combinations of lifestyles. It is ludicrous to think that sheer numbers of bodies in any way equates a similarity in how they are governed. But, if it is the law, then it won't be the first one that must be adhered to, despite common sense.

Jockeying cities and communities around like pieces of a puzzle, just to see where they "fit" is wrong. Without considering the affiliations, the cooperative projects, or the working-together arrangements, the proposed dissection will be very disruptive. East County folks work together, and should have a common focal point to gather to. When a gathering of cities works for the regional good, on common grounds and with mutual interests, things that are needed get done. We East County "hicks" are proud of our lines of communication and our mutually beneficial endeavors.

It would seem to this viewer that the the incorporated cities should be left alone. They have pulled themselves up by their boot straps, so to speak, and taken charge of their own destiny by opting to govern themselves. City governments, working with others, have powers and are able to forge their own plans to provide for themselves and the region, as well. The unincorporated areas are still nursing at the County breast and must resort to supplication for any favors that they desire. Since these are rather loosely tied together communities, why not do the shaving there to equalize the population counts for each district if it is so important. I do not think that they have to slice through Spring Valley's business district, or disrupt centers of populace by heavy-handed cleavage, but surely, there is a way to make the numbers come out right without doing so.

I have worked with Supervisor Leon Williams for any years on MTDB, and consider him a fine man and a friend, I would be pleased to have him represent me, but I believe that his part of the county differs somewhat from mine. Frankly, I could be happier with George Bailey's representation, but he is an East county person, and I must stand with him as my supervisor. The character and special needs of the supervisorial distirict are what are important, and nothing should be done to impair the good things that are in place now. The East County Economic Development Council would sorely miss Lemon Grove and Santee. Spring Valley should not be arbitrarily dumped into South Bay, at least not in its entirety.

Maps are very could and non-descriptive of anything other than the topography, and possibly, the census numbers. Government is "of the people" and they should be the primary consideration in any such major deliberations. I sincerely hope that the citizens of Lemon Grove call the Board of Supervisors and make their wishes known in this matter.

Father's Day, June 16, 1991 Gettysburg, Pennsylvania

In this, the 44th year of my becoming a father, it is somehow fitting that I find myself at Gettysburg. The local Chamber of Commerce has a motto: "Come to Pennsylvania where our nation was born and visit Gettysburg where our nation was saved." This is truly where our nation went through the most painful of all maturing changes and achieved manhood ... and fatherhood. Along cemetery ridge, at the peach orchard, up the round-top and across the wheat field, Americans fought each other with a fury and a resolve that has never been equaled against any enemy before or since.

We have recently come through the Amish and Mennonite country of Pennsylvania where violence is abhorrent to a people who refuse even to defend themselves. One tourist was heard to say, "I'll bet the Armed Forces Day parade isn't a big one around here." He was answered with the suggestion that it just might take more courage for some to obey that premise than to go off to war with the rest.

It struck me as I listened to the narrative of this most famous battle where 51,000 casualties made this the bloodiest battle of American history; where brother fought brother - Americans, all - that our worst battles are actually with ourselves. In Pickett's Charge alone, there were 10,000 casualties in the space of 50 minutes, total. Although the Confederate army was superior in numbers, and some say, in leadership, this three-day battle was acclaimed the "high watermark" of the Confederacy, and their failure to prevail at Gettysburg broke their back and exhausted their spirit. Even though the war would take two more years to wind down, this was the deciding battle of our Civil War.

Perhaps it was when the power of right intervened and guided the destiny of our nation in the true meaning of freedom. Maybe, it is like the suppression of our personal, deep secret fears and temptations that afford a constant battle within each of us. We may fight our own personal Gettysburg, many times in our lives, and survive the stronger for it.

This is an awe-inspiring place that every American should experience to appreciate the tempering process that our nation has gone through. This is the only place that I have seen a look of pride, a smile and tears streaming down one's cheeks - all at the same time on one face.

As someone once said, "It is for us the living, to be dedicated here to the unfinished work which they who taught here have thus far so nobly advanced."

Councilman Bob Burns will address matters of concern to Lemon Grove and its citizens. If you have questions or suggestions, send them to P.O. Box BB, Lemon Grove, CA 91946.

Commentary

Sununu or later

by Paul Treske

This columnist has never been one to kick someone while he is falling, but in the current case of John Sununu, it's impossible to resist. There is something wondrously satisfying when someone who has been overpoweringly arrogant takes the fall. And so, it is with John Sununu.

Of course, it is the Democrats who are gleefully beating the drums at the White House Chief of Staff's fall from grace, but if one looks closely, it is the White House insiders who really want to see him go. Who can blame them? From all reports, he has been arrogant, abrasive, belittling and an all-around general mule to deal with.

Now, to give the man his due, a certain amount of this goes with the job. The same derogatory words were used to describe Robert Halderman, Hamilton Jordon and most certainly, the unlamented Donald Regan. Defending the president's office entry is a difficult job that tends to make few friends, but Sununu seems to have carried this fine art to new heights.

And, now, he's compounded it all with his travel problems and his reaction to them. Using transportation paid for by us taxpayers to go to the dentist and other non-governmental activities brands him as a cheapskate, as well as highly-insensitive to the role of government. But, utilizing corporate aircraft owned by companies doing government business for political fund-raising events would seem to go into the zone of conflict of interest.

But, the real John Sununu shows itself in his reaction to the well-deserved criticism of his actions.

He does not for one moment accept any responsibility for his mounting problems. Instead, in the true tradition of the arrogant and self-serving, he blames everyone else. Included on his list of "those at fault" are Secretary of State Baker, Treasury Secretary Brady, Commerce Secretary Mosbacher and Transportation Secretary Skinner. All of which conjures up images of those hard-working and otherwise preoccupied men forcing the rotund Sununu into a White House limousine and sending him to a New York rare stamp auction, or tricking him into taking his family on a skiing vacation on an Air Force jet.

Sooner or later, quietly or otherwise, this man will leave his position as Chief of Staff. He is too much of a liability for President Bush to carry into the 1992 presidential election campaign. Bush owes much of his actual election to Sununu's support in the 1988 New Hampshire primary and the president is inordinately loyal to his inner circle. But Sununu will have to go. The undercurrent of grumbling within the moderate wing of the Republican party will push his departure along and Sununu's own inability to accept responsibility will probably finish the job. But, in the meantime, there is much joy among the Democrats just watching him dangle in the wind. In fact, they're having so much fun, they seem to have forgotten all about Dan Quayle. How lucky can you get?

The Pursuit of Happiness

by Joseph Walker

"We hold these truths to be self-evident, that all men are created equal, that they are endowed by their Creator with certain unalienable Rights, that among these are Life, Liberty and the pursuit of Happiness."

I don't know why the moment is frozen in my memory, but it is. My fourth-grade teacher, Miss Green, is introducing us to The Declaration of Independence, reading it to us with passion. Maybe it's because she is a fine reader, or maybe it's because I have a crush on this young, handsome woman, but it feels as if every phrase shoots directly from her lips to my soul. I'm not just hearing the Declaration, I'm feeling it.

Especially, that last phrase. At age ten, I'm really into happiness, so learning that my headlong pursuit of it is one of my "unalienable Rights" ... well, suddenly, I like the Founding Fathers even more than the Yankees (not counting Mickey Mantle, of course).

Only one problem. I have no idea what the word "unalienable" means.

"I think it means you can't have it," George said when I asked him about the word during recess, "You know, like an unalienable dream." My heart sank. Then I considered it. "I don't think that's right, George," I said. "Why would those guys get excited about rights they can't have. It doesn't make sense."

So, I went to the smartest person I knew: JoAnn. Now, you have to understand that to be caught talking to JoAnn - alone - was to risk ostracism from my circle of friends well into the next century. But I was desperate.

"Well," JoAnn pondered, "I know "alien" means someone from another country, so "unalienable" must mean something that you can't bring in from someplace else."

She seemed to know what she was talking about, even though I couldn't for the life of me figure out what it had to do with happiness. Which is probably why I decided she was wrong. So, I gathered my courage and waited after school to ask Miss Greene (Not that she was scary or anything, it was just ... well, you know, that crush.)

"It's a very good question, Joe," she beamed when I asked her. "Let's go to the dictionary and find out." Holy cow! Why didn't I think of that?

Before long, I learned that an "unalienable Right" is one that cannot be "alienated, surrendered or transferred." Now, that was more like it. I had the right - even the duty - to pursue happiness, and no one could take it away from me.

No one, that is, except Mom.

"Good," she said when I announced my intention to devote the rest of my life to my "unalienable Right" to pursue happiness. "Now, go clean your room."

Somehow, this wasn't working. Where were the days of frivolity, where breakfast was pie and root beer, and "work" was getting up to change the channel? Where were, after all, the things I was sure I needed to be happy - and happiness was my "Right."

I've learned a lot about happiness since then - sometimes, by getting what I thought I wanted. I had a job were I had to watch TV eight hours a day and it became a chore. I had a ten-speed and the chain kept falling off. I went to fancy parties and was bored. I played three softball games in one day and I couldn't walk normally for a week. Just recently, I had pizza twice in a row and I still can't look a pepperoni in the eye. And, I even had pie and root beer for breakfast once. It made me sick.

Mostly, I've learned that happiness isn't a possession. You can't buy it, and no one can give it to you. It's a feeling, and it usually involves things like family, peace, security, love and service. It doesn't always come easily, but it is always worthwhile.

And, I think that's what the signers of the Declaration of Independence had in mind when they affirmed humanity's God-given right to "the pursuit of Happiness." They weren't talking about momentary pleasures; they were talking abut long-term. whole soul, capital 'H' - type happiness. It isn't something you can touch, but something you feel. It isn't something you get, but something you are. It isn't a lifestyle, it's a way of life.

But, it is something you have to pursue. Only the journey won't take you far and wide, it will take you deep within yourself. You may not rack up any frequent flier miles, but you will return with much grander bonuses - peace, contentment, and happiness. After all, it's your unalienable Right."

(Joseph Walker is a bishop in The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints.)

From Where I Sit

Old-time Fourth

by Frank Andrews

Many, many years ago, when I was a youngster, the 4th of July was celebrated with real firecrackers and more freedom to buy and use them. Of course, there was an occasional accident and loss of a finger but that freedom meant something to us kids.

My dad would always give me a five-dollar bill to buy fireworks at George's store. I had to hit him up for the money on the 3rd because by the 4th he would have drunk a 5th, and I couldn't get through to him again until the 6th. Five bucks in those days was a heap of money. I got a big paper bag full of all the different varieties for that much dough. Most of all I would get the loudest, most powerful firecrackers available. Fireworks was a different thing and used mostly after dark for a breathtaking spectacle. Dad would always insist, "Frankie, be sure to get some skyrockets, Roman candles, cartwheels, sparklers, and any others that we can shoot off at night."

It was unbelievable how our gang used those powerful crackers. One trick was to put a Cherry Salute bomb under a can and blow it sky high. One of my more ruthless buddies would catch a mud turtle, get it to snap at a cracker, and off went his head. It is hard to imagine kids doing such dastardly pranks in those days.

We would always carry a lit piece of punk along to avoid lighting matches for every blow-up. A lot of the firecrackers didn't have to be lit to be heard. Some would explode by throwing them on the cement sidewalk while others could send off a loud report by just grinding them under our shoes on the cement.

Besides our own personal after dark fireworks display, the local amusement park would put on a most brilliant show that could be seen for miles. Of course those old time displays were no show compared to the present day, million-dollar spectacles.

I guess I was privileged at the time to spend that much money on the 4th of July compared to the rest of my poor buddies. It did help attract playmates to help me blow my money up in smoke. Most every kid had a cap pistol for cowboy and Indian wars. Some were automatics and take a whole roll of caps while others were just plain old single shots. Besides the guns, prestige was flaunted by the more elaborate, elegant holsters. I being more frugal, would always stash several rolls of caps away for our shoot-out game the rest of the summer.

Our 4th of July celebrations were very mild compared to the gangs of today. Our parents thought we were rowdy then, but now, instead of firecrackers they use real guns and aim to kill. Maybe instead of anymore rules and regulations, better parental supervision and spiritual guidance could be injected into our young people's lives.

PUBLIC NOTICES

NOTICE OF PETITION TO ADMINISTER ESTATE OF FAYA L. COMPTON
Case Number: 154899

To all heirs, beneficiaries, creditors, contingent creditors, and persons who may be otherwise interested in the will or estate, or both, of: FAYA L. COMPTON
A PETITION has been filed by NORMA ALEX COMPTON KRANITZ in the Superior Court of California, County of San Diego
THE PETITION requests that NORMA ALEX COMPTON KRANITZbe appointed as personal representative to administer the estate of the decedent.
THE PETITION requests the decedent's WILL and codicils, if any, be admitted to probate. The will and any codicils are available for examination in the file kept by the court.
THE PETITION requests authority to administer the estate under the Independent Administration of Estates Act. (This authority will allow the personal representative to take many actions without obtaining court approval. Before taking certain very important actions, however, the personal representative will be required to give notice to interested persons unless they have waived notice or consented to the proposed action.) The independent administration authority will be granted unless an interested person files an objection to the petition and shows good cause why the court should not grant the authority.
A HEARING on the petition will be held on JUL 22, 1991 at 1:45 p.m. in Dept. F-5, located at 1501-55 Sixth Avenue, San Diego, CA 92101
IF YOU OBJECT to the granting of the petition, you should appear at the hearing and state your objections or file written objections with the court before the hearing. Your appearance may be in person or by your attorney.
IF YOU ARE A CREDITOR or a contingent creditor of the deceased, you must file your claim with the court and mail a copy to the personal representative appointed by the court within four months from the date of first issuance of letters as provided in section 9100 of the California Probate Code. The time for filing claims will not expire before four months from the hearing date noticed above.
YOU MAY EXAMINE the file kept by the court. If you are a person interested in the estate, you may file with the court a formal Request for Special Notice of the filing of an inventory and appraisal of estate assets or of any petition or account as provided in section 1250 of the California Probate Code. A Request for Special Notice form is available from the court clerk.

NOTICE OF PETITION TO ADMINISTER ESTATE OF HARRIETTE J. MIDOSE
Case Number: 154917

To all heirs, beneficiaries, creditors, contingent creditors, and persons who may be otherwise interested in the will or estate, or both, of: Harriette J. Midose
A PETITION has been filed by John William Midose in the Superior Court of California, County of San Diego
THE PETITION requests that John William Midose be appointed as personal representative to administer the estate of the decedent.
THE PETITION requests the decedent's WILL and codicils, if any, be admitted to probate. The will and any codicils are available for examination in the file kept by the court.
THE PETITION requests authority to administer the estate under the Independent Administration of Estates Act. (This authority will allow the personal representative to take many actions without obtaining court approval. Before taking certain very important actions, however, the personal representative will be required to give notice to interested persons unless they have waived notice or consented to the proposed action.) The independent administration authority will be granted unless an interested person files an objection to the petition and shows good cause why the court should not grant the authority.
A HEARING on the petition will be held on AUG 5, 1991 at 1:45 p.m. in Dept. F-5, located at 1501-55 Sixth Avenue, San Diego, CA 92101-1946
IF YOU OBJECT to the granting of the petition, you should appear at the hearing and state your objections or file written objections with the court before the hearing. Your appearance may be in person or by your attorney.
IF YOU ARE A CREDITOR or a contingent creditor of the deceased, you must file your claim with the court and mail a copy to the personal representative appointed by the court within four months from the date of first issuance of letters as provided in section 9100 of the California Probate Code. The time for filing claims will not expire before four months from the hearing date noticed above.
YOU MAY EXAMINE the file kept by the court. If you are a person interested in the estate, you may file with the court a formal Request for Special Notice of the filing of an inventory and appraisal of estate assets or of any petition or account as provided in section 1250 of the California Probate Code. A Request for Special Notice form is available from the court clerk.
